TEMPE, Jan. 22.—A wedding in which Tempeans will be interested has just been announced as having been solemnized in Safford on January 8. The principals in the affair were L. J. Mr. Hogg stole a march on his friends and when returning from the east went by Safford and was married. The next draft of men for the army will determine whether Mrs. Hogg will come to Tempe to live or whether she will continue with her school.

EXTENSION SCHOOL STARTS NEXT WEEK

MESA, Jan. 22.—Principal Alma Davis of the Alma school is in receipt of the program for the "Extension School in Agriculture and Home Economics," which will be held at the Alma school on Monday and Tuesday, January 23-24. This extension school, which is held by the agricultural department of the state university, offers to the people of this section, a splendid opportunity to hear experts in the various lines of agriculture and live stock. The home economics naturally will appeal to women of the town as well as ranchers' wives. Emphasis is laid on the fact that the Alma school is located just across the road from the state experimental farm, which is under the management of H. A. Woods and visits will be made to the farm for the purpose of illustrating the various subjects under discussion. This will be the only extension school near Mesa and ranchers of Lehi and elsewhere in the vicinity will doubtless avail themselves of its proximity. The following is the program as sent in from the university:

Mammoth Cooked Food Sale
The greatest cooked food sale ever pulled off in Mesa or probably in the Salt River valley will be held Saturday at the Red Cross room for the benefit of the local branch and will last all day or until every toothsome dainty is sold. Mesdames W. J. Clemens and M. L. Gibbons, together with Mrs. Emma Rollins and Mrs. Eliza Peterson of the Maricopa Stake Relief society, have taken the lead in the enlisting of every housewife in Mesa, all women members of the Red Cross in Lehi and Alma, and in fact every woman who will contribute some article of cooked food for the great sale. It is a stupendous undertaking, and there will be such an aggregation of chicken, salads, pies, cakes, home made bread, etc., as will offer to the hungry public temptations beyond resistance. One thing, so say the women who are at work on the plan, is to be remembered, namely, that those who donate the foods, should also purchase other foods, as this will serve to aid in getting rid of the great quantity of edibles that will be brought in. By the way, there is to be no expense account. Every cent taken in will go to the Red Cross.

Lecture Tonight
Attention is again called to the lecture tonight at the Majestic theater to be delivered by John Randall Dunn, C. S. Mr. Dunn is a member of the board of lectureship of the Mother church, the First Church of Christ Scientists, Boston. The lecture is free and will begin at 8:15 o'clock.

On Visit to Son
Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Norton of Cobden Hill, Ill., are here on visit to their son, M. J. Norton of the Salt River Valley Bank. When the visitors left their home, the snow was nearly knee deep, and while Mr. and Mrs. Norton of Mesa shiver on these frosty mornings, the parents smilingly comment on the delightful summer time in January in the Salt River Valley.

Magazines Coming in
Over a hundred late magazines have come in to the commercial club office the first day following the request of the club secretary. These will be started on their long journey to the homes of the members. They will do their share toward helping some homesick soldier boys to while away a lonely hour. Remember that the commercial club is furnishing the stamps and attending to the mailing of the magazines. Bring them to the office at Chandler Court. The club will do the rest.

Committees Are Busy
Late yesterday afternoon committees from the Mesa Commercial club started around securing names for the new year to begin February 1. Only one committee was seen after an hour's work, and reported four new names out of the first dozen men approached. There is no doubt but that the campaign will end up with practically every old member in the harness and a nice lot of new names out of the first dozen men approached. GLLENDALE HOME
IS BUARGLARIZED

GLLENDALE, Jan. 22.—The home of Breene McAbee of the Peoples Lumber company was burglarized Sunday night between 5 and 9 o'clock, while the family were away from home. The party or parties secured a lot of Mr. McAbee's clothing and Mrs. McAbee's jewelry. A purse containing $15.00 in one of the dresser drawers was overlooked. The contents of the drawers were scattered about the room. The family especially regret the loss of one diamond ring and a la valiere set with three diamonds for their gifts to Mrs. McAbee. The officers have several suspects on the list and will no doubt recover the property and punish the thief.

Dewey Little has purchased the Pantatorium from Robert Saulman. Mr. Little was the original owner of the Pantatorium, selling out to Mr. Saulman about 6 months ago and went to Miami. He finds he prefers Glendaie and came back. Mr. Saulman will not leave the valley and will probably go into some other business.

Harry Lewellen is very ill with pneumonia at his mother's home. The Modern Woodmen of America will give a program and public installation in the near future to which they will invite their friends.

The Royal Neighbors held their regular meeting last night at Ireland's hall. There was a good attendance. The 11 directors elected Friday night at the meeting of the Red Cross will meet tonight at Miss Chamberlin's on Fourth street. The executive board for the year will be appointed.

Mrs. George Walters is ill with a severe attack of a gripe. Mrs. Frank Lohman visited her son in Phoenix yesterday. Mrs. Lohman has two sons in the navy and the third is called to the army.

William Bartlett has been surveying in the Russian colony the past 10 days. Mrs. W. E. Crawford and children left last night to join Mr. Crawford in Los Angeles.

STRANGE EXPLOIT OF SLEEP WALKER

(Chicago Journal)
The somnambulist does remarkable things while asleep that he never would be able to do when awake. One authority upon this subject, a nerve specialist who has studied it carefully, recently compiled a list of curious exploits performed by sleep walkers. Some of these are so extravagant as to seem impossible, but they are all vouched for by the doctor in question.

A young girl was confronted with the necessity of winning a scholarship or abandoning her university course. On taking up her books one morning the girl found that she already knew the lessons for that day. She was wholly unable to understand, as she had not looked at them before. When this happened several times the girl told her mother about it, and the latter watched the girl closely. In a night or two she saw her arise, get her books and begin to study.

There was another student, a young man, who had an obsession for rising in his sleep and wandering about the school dormitory. His fellow students began to throw pillows at him after this had been repeated a good many times. But instead of wakening, the young man became an expert dodger and seemed to enjoy the sport. Then the other students erected barricades and put chairs in his path. But he succeeded in finding his way about, despite everything, moving the chairs, leaping the barricades and continuing his nocturnal wanderings.

To Yuma and Imperial

The road from Phoenix to the Imperial Valley, by way of Paloma, Welton, Yuma and Niland, is not in good shape by any stretch of the imagination, but is entirely passable by cars of any size or weight. The stretch from Phoenix to Arlington, over the valley's dirt roads is in good condition after the light rains of a week ago. Beyond Arlington, before reaching Agua Caliente, is encountered a diversity of roads. The mountain roads are in fine hard condition, though there are a number of steep short ups and downs and many sharp curves. Part of the desert road is in good shape, though there are long stretches of ruts and chock-holes.

Beyond Agua Caliente the desert road is excellent until approaching Paloma, where numerous roads full of chocks and ruts are encountered.

Beyond Paloma, possibly a third of the distance to Welton, the road is in fine shape and two-thirds of the distance is bad because of chock-holes and ruts and sand. At Welton, for a stretch of a mile or two, the road has been filled with straw to make it more substantial. The newest portion is hard pulling but the rest is good.

From Welton to Yuma probably half the distance is paved and is excellent, while the other half is unpaved and in bad shape. Beyond Yuma, the road to Niland is full of sand, arroyos, small washes and chock holes. Most of them can be negotiated on high, nearly any bad stretch on second and very few places will require low.

The trip requires at least two days of driving, using all the day from dawn to dark, and better judgment might require three days. The bad parts of the road require slow driving, from 6 to 10 miles per hour, and there are not many stretches where a spurt of 30 miles per hour can be maintained.

Water is obtainable at ranches and towns along the road at distances from 15 to 35 miles apart, except on the Yuma-Niland stretch, where the distances are greater. Gasoline may be procured at any of the Salt River Valley towns, at Agua Caliente, Dome, Yuma and Niland.
